Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: . . . heirs or kindred, but also that he died intestate. The petition of the widow must set forth these facts, and must be verified by oath or affirmation; Section 1, Act of April 6, 1833. Tais remedy being statutory must be strictly pursued (Act of March 21, 1806,) and manifestly it cannot be adopted by the claimant here. Whatever difficulty may seem to arise is removed if the word heirs, in the section relied upon by the claimant, was used, as it probably was, in the popular sense, under which all persons who take the estate of a decedent, whether by virtue of his will or by operation of law, are equally comprehended. We think that the auditing judge was right in holding that. as the testator died without leaving issue, the petitioner was entitled to that share of his estate which, in default of such...
