Excerpt: . . . father shield: All, fired with noble erruulation, strive, And with a storm of darts to distance drive The Trojan chief; who held at bay, from far On his Vulcanian orb sustained the war. Eneas thus oerwhelrnd on every side, Their first assault undaunted did abide, And thus to Lausus, loud with friendly thrcatning cryd: Why wilt thou rush to certain death, and rage In rash attempts beyond thy tender age, Bctrayd by pious love i a--And afterwards: He grievd, he wept; the sight an image brought Of his own filial love; a sadly pleasing thought. But beside the outlines of the posture, the design of the picture comprehends in the next place the forms of faces, which are to be different; and so in a poem or a play must the several characters of the persons be distinguished from each other. I knew a poet, whom out of respect I will not name, who being too witty himself, could draw nothing but wits in a comedy of his; even his fools were infected with the disease of their author. They overflowed with smart repar- tees, and were only distinguished from the intended wits by being called eoxcombs, though they deserved not so scandalous a name. Another, who had a great genius for tragedy, following the fury of his natural temper, made every man and woman too in his plays stark raging mud: there was not a sober person to be had for love or...
